

Miss Ayesha's Philosophy

As a childcare educator I believe that each child is an individual and at stage of their own learning and development . I believe that the foundations of early childhood education is to value their individuality, stimulate their curiosity and desire to learn, and to enhance their all development domains through quality care and education specifically catered for each child. (Gardner's Theory of multiple intelligences )

I believe that environment plays a major role in the success of an early childhood program .it should enhance the children's interest in all development domains .Children learn through play and I believe that children should be allowed time and freedom to explore the environment and activities at their own pace and in the way they learn. Children should be supported and encouraged to attempt challenging activities with assistance and guidance until they are able to achieve and succeed by themselves ( Vygotsky's Zone of Proximal Development )

As an early childhood educator I believe that relationship of trust and confidence with families plays a vital role in promoting a warm ,welcoming and nurturing environment for children .I would always invite and encourage parents and families to contribute to their child's learning and development in variety of ways such as spending time in the room and daily interactions with educators ,bringing in items from home to show it to friends , donating resources etc .
